Historic Parks

Methodology

A total of 74 parks were identified as being established before 1943, 34 of which had not been included in the Renaissance Plan. Fair Park and Sharrock-Niblo were not included in the scope because they were covered through other extensive research and planning documents. The Great Trinity Forest is currently under research.

Initial park research and site reconnaissance for the pre-1943 parks were conducted to provide an overview of the history and significance. The research and site recognition was used to define priority levels for the parks. Parks with Priority Levels 1 or 2 were selected for additional research and documentation. The research documented the park's history, the establishment date and date of city acquisition, early development of the site, and the park's role in the local community. Because this effort supplements the Renaissance Plan, the documentation uses the same organization and categories of information.

Level 1

A park is classified as Level 1 if the site has significant natural or historic features, the site is mostly intact, the site is a cemetery, or the site is significant to the cultural identity of the surrounding community as discovered through research. All parks included in the Renaissance Plan were considered priority Level 1.

Level 2

A park is classified as Level 2 if developed before 1943 and initial research suggested that the park might have been important to the local community. Available historic documentation suggests the park contributes to the understanding of the heritage and development of the city or has unique natural or historic features. The site has some modification but the character of the park has been maintained.

Level 3

A park is classified as Level 3 if developed after 1943, pre-1943 parks with no historic character or very little historic documentation. Modifications and renovations that altered the historic character significantly altered the site features. Parks classified as Level Three were not included in the inventory.

Butler-Nelson Cemetery		City Acquisition: 1971
2900 Hatcher Street, Dallas, TX 75215	Priority Level: I	Historic Names: Woodland and Hillside Cemeteries
Butler Nelson Cemetery is a combination of two historic cemeteries that served the African American community, Woodland Cemetery and Hillside Cemetery. Burials occurred in Woodland before it was officially dedicated in 1911 when the land was purchased for use as private cemetery. The oldest headstone is dated 1896. Woodland was the second cemetery to serve the African American community and is known to have been active from 1896 to 1969. Hillside was established in 1921 by G.W. Brock, a veterinarian, for the purpose of a cemetery. A section of Hillside was used as pet cemetery from the 1920's to the 1950's with headstones. By the 1950's the cemeteries' where overgrown and neglected. In 1954 Reverend L. Butler Nelson moved to Dallas to serve as a pastor at the Salem Baptist Church. He was appalled at the condition of the cemeteries and engaged the community to improve the maintenance of the site. In 1971 the city acquired the sites and renamed the land in honor of Nelson for his service and commitment to the preservation of the site. Glenoak Cemetery is an active cemetery located to the south of Hillside and not managed by the City of Dallas.

Cedar Crest Golf Course		City Acquisition: 1946
1800 Southernland Avenue, Dallas, TX 75203	Priority Level: 2	Historic Names: Not Applicable
The golf course was originally developed as a private country club in 1916. It was the third golf course to open in Dallas after Tenison and Stevens. The first Dallas Open was held at Cedar Crest in 1926. The Pro golfers were so impressed by the course quality that in 1927 the PGA Championship was hosted at the Cedar Crest. Bryon Nelson, the future golf legend was caddy for Jim Turnesa, the winner of the championship. After the stock market crash of 1929 the course was closed and the land was sold to the Schoellkopf family. After World War II, golf became a popular past time among the general public. The general public did not want to use private country clubs because of the high fees required to adequately maintain the courses. During the post war period, the City of Dallas felt increased pressure to provide additional public golf courses. In 1946 the Park Board had the opportunity to purchase the former country club. The original clubhouse was torn down and the course was expanded by the City in 1949. Before the purchase of Cedar Crest in 1946, Dallas had only 3 public courses, Stevens, Tenison and Oak Grove. Oak Grove was a course that the City leased in the 1920's.

Cherrywood Park		City Acquisition: 1939
5400 Cedar Springs Road, Dallas, TX 75235	Priority Level: 2	Historic Names: Not Applicable
The land was donated by Christian Weichsel in 1939. The park was named Cherrywood at the request of the Weichsel family. In a 1944 master plan created by Harland Bartholomew and Associates from St. Louis MO, noted that for almost 2 decades the Park Boards had focused almost entirely on improvement and development on existing parks. From 1939 to 1944, Cherrywood was the only park donated; most of the land acquired during this time was annexed by the City. Originally the park included a fountain and children’s play equipment.

Cochran Park		City Acquisition: 1926
2600 North Henderson Avenue, Dallas, TX 75201	Priority Level: 2	Historic Names: Not Applicable
The land was donated in 1926 by Mr. and Mrs. Sam P. Cochran and adjoins the Vickery School, now known as the James B. Bonham Elementary School. Cochran Park is one of many parks donated by a Park Board member and was given around the same time as Munger and Ruthmeade Parks. Sam P. Cochran served on the Park Board during World War I and initiated many resolutions of a “Patriotic” nature including offering the entire Fair Park site to the United States government for any use that could help in the war effort. Cochran Park was originally used by both the Board of Education and the Park and Recreation Department for use by the neighborhood children. The school/park partnership was proposed by George Kessler in the 1911 city master plan, A City Plan for Dallas. In many established neighborhoods land was limited and the schools were generally located in close proximity to the kid population. This idea allowed for the most efficient use of the facilities and reduced duplicate costs for the City departments. Improvements to the park were made through the WPA improvement program from 1936 – 1938 and included “picnic units.”

Confederate Cemetery		City Acquisition: 1936
4225 Electra Street, Dallas, TX 75215	Priority Level: I	Historic Names: Veteran's Cemetery
J.A. and Mattie Crawford sold land near Oakland Cemetery to the County of Dallas on May 17, 1901. The land was once part of the 4,444 acre Lagow League, land given to Thomas Lagow for service to the Republic of Texas. On August 8, 1907 the Dallas county Commissioner’s Court dedicated the land for burial of ex-confederate soldiers and their wives under the direction of the Sterling Price Camp No. 31, United Confederate Veterans. The Sterling Price Camp was established in Dallas in 1889 with the purpose to perpetuate the memory of the confederate soldiers. The cemetery was known to have been active from 1905 to 1946. On November 17, 1936 the Dallas County Commissioners Court sold the cemetery to the City of Dallas for $10.00. The property was once surrounded by a wrought-iron fence and has a large monument in the center of the cemetery. A tree grew into a small section of the wrought-iron fence that still remains on the site.

Eloise Lundy Park		City Acquisition: 1915
1200 Sabine Street, Dallas, TX 75201	Priority Level: I	Historic Names: Oak Cliff Negro Park, Oak Cliff Park
Established in 1915 as the Oak Cliff Negro Park, it was the first park dedicated solely for use by African Americans. The original site was 4 ½ acres near the Trinity River. In 1928 the park was reduced in half when the City built the levees proposed by George Kessler in A City Plan for Dallas. The National Youth Administration built a comfort station. The site received many improvements during the WWII era that included a pool, a new entrance way, tennis courts, community building and small golf course. These park features were removed sometime after the 1950's. In 1963 the park was renamed Oak Cliff Park after integration. In 1987 the park was renamed for Eloise Lundy, one of the first African American park and recreation leaders to work for the Works Progress Administration in Dallas during the Great Depression. She was born in Dallas, a graduate of Booker T. Washington High School and took courses in recreation at Southern Methodist University. Although she did not have a degree, she was known to have been well read and knowledgeable on many subjects. Lundy joined the City of Dallas Park Department in the 1940's and was appointed to supervise the recreation center in the park in 1945. She was a community leader, known as a motivator and hands-on instructor who devoted much of her time to kids at the recreation centers. Lundy became a district supervisor for approximately 45 parks before she retired in 1974. She remained an active leader in the community and taught ceramics at the recreation centers after retirement.

Freedman's Memorial Cemetery		City Acquisition: 1965
2525 North Central Expressway, Dallas, TX 75204	Priority Level: I	Historic Names: Freedman's Grave Yard, Freedman's Memorial Park and Cemetery
Freedman's cemetery is located in a part of Dallas that was originally settled by freed slaves after the end of the Civil War known as Freedman's Town. This area was a thriving part of Dallas and was the black cultural center of Texas. The Dallas Landmark Designation mentions that evidence exists to suggest that a "Colored" burial spot was located in this area just prior to the Civil War. However the first records of the cemetery are for one acre of land purchased in 1869. The cemetery was expanded in 1879 when an additional 3 acres was sold to the Freedman's Graveyard Trustees. The cemetery is known to have been active from 1869 to 1925. Within a few years after the cemetery expansion, three more cemeteries were established close to Freedman's. These cemeteries included Calvary, the Catholic cemetery in 1872; Trinity now called Greenwood, acquired in 1875; and Emanu-El, the Jewish cemetery established in 1881. Part of the 1869 Freedman's site is now within Emanu-El Cemetery. The site was significantly affected by construction of the Central Expressway in the 1950's with many of the graves covered or removed. In 1965 the City of Dallas and the descendants of several families buried in the cemetery reached an agreement to improve the site and provide a marker acknowledging the cemeteries history. Little evidence remains of the cemetery because most of the features have been removed or built over through the years. In 1989 community representatives, the City of Dallas and Texas Department of Transportation worked to preserve the park prior the second Central Expressway expansion. Over 1,200 identifiable graves have been located through an archeological survey completed by the Texas Department of Transportation. In 1990 a memorial was constructed to commemorate the site.

Herndon Park		City Acquisition: 1929
400 East Woodin Boulevard, Dallas, Tx 75201	Priority Level: 2	Historic Names: Not Applicable
The park was acquired by the Parks Department in 1929 after a 4 year long legal process. The park was named in honor of E.M. Herndon “who donated his legal services in process of acquiring the park site” by a resolution of the Trinity Heights Improvement League. Various improvements to the park had been made throughout the 1930’s including the addition of lights, and Tennis Courts. The stone entrance gate was constructed in 1940 by the Park Department. A letter from Hare and Hare, the landscape architects hired to create a master plan for the park system, included a third series of improvements to the park in 1942. These changes included renovations to the parks pathways, tennis courts, and stone walls, modifications to the creek and soil improvements.

Maria Luna Park		City Acquisition: 1938
4500 Maple Avenue, Dallas, TX 75219	Priority Level: 2	Historic Names: Maple Park
The City of Dallas acquired Maple Park in 1938 as part of an agreement that brought the Public Works Administration housing project to Dallas. The park had been required by the agreement which brought the federal funds for the housing project to Dallas. Maple Park adjoins the Cedar Springs Place housing project. Under the WPA Park Improvement Program the area was equipped with playground equipment and athletic facilities, including a children’s pool. The park was renamed in honor of Maria Luna in 1990, an early business woman and leader in the immigrant Mexican community near the park. Luna, a widowed mother of two, immigrated to the United States in 1923 and built one of the most successful Hispanic and woman owned businesses in North Texas.

Moore Park		City Acquisition: 1936
1900 East Eighth Street, Dallas, TX 75201	Priority Level: 2	Historic Names: 8th Street Negro Park
The 8th Street Negro Park was originally part of the Cabell farm the land was purchased in 1938 for the purpose of creating a segregated park. In 1945, the Park Board began concentrating on parks used by the African American community and commissioned a report from the National Recreation Association to help generate improvements and recreation opportunities for the community. The report stated that names like Hall Street, Eight Street, and Elm Thicket sounded disreputable because similar names usually were used for low-rent or slum districts. Hall Street was changed to Griggs park in honor of an African American minister and Eighth Street was renamed Moore Park. Elm Thicket was renamed for Thomas Hilliard, but was soon lost with the expansion of Love Field. The Dallas Negro Chamber of Commerce selected the name in honor of Will Moore an early pioneer, Oak Cliff citizen and leader in the community. The park was dedicated on Juneteenth in 1940 with a ceremony honoring the few remaining former slaves in Dallas. Moore Park was a focal point for the community as a place for recreation and social events. Some of the improvements made to the park from 1940 to 1945 included park land expansion, the construction of a shelter and parking area, a 9 hole golf course, construction of a baseball diamond with bleachers, a backstop, fence, drinking fountains, lights, play apparatus, picnic facilities and a comfort station.

Oak Cliff Founders Park		City Acquisition: 1938
1300 North Zang Boulevard, Dallas, TX 75201	Priority Level: 2	Historic Names: Samuell Colorado Park
City of Dallas acquired the land for Oak Cliff Founders Park in 1938 as part of the land grant made by Dr. WW Samuell's will. Dr. Samuell's donation of 900 acres for park purposes throughout the city was the single largest benefactor to the City of Dallas Parks Department. The original landscaping for Oak Cliff Founders Park was lost in the 1980's. In 2003 Ralph Pinkus donated 50 twenty-five year old crepe myrtles for the park and the bronze statue was donated by the Oak Cliff Lion's Club in 2004. A portion of the site along Colorado Boulevard and extending through the center of the park is included as part of the Lake Cliff National Register District. The City of Dallas Landmark District boundaries are different than the National Register District. The Landmark District includes part of the corner of what is noted as Samuell Colorado Park.

Ruthmeade Park		City Acquisition: 1925
800 South Van Buren, Dallas, TX 75201	Priority Level: 2	Historic Names: Not Applicable
The land for Ruthmeade Park was designated a park by the Murphy and Bolanz Company around 1914. Murphy and Bolanz developed the site as a rustic park and maintained the natural creek and existing trees. Beginning in 1921 the Murphy and Bolanz Company worked to donate the land to the Park Board under the condition the city would maintain and improve the park. In 1925 the City of Dallas accepted the property and worked to improve it with the addition of features like children’s play equipment.

Stone Place Mall		City Acquisition: 0
100 Stone Place, Dallas, TX 75201	Priority Level: 2	Historic Names: Stone Street
The street that once connected Elm Street and Main Street is named for Barton Warren Stone born in 1817 in Georgetown, Kentucky and passed away in Dallas in 1881. He became close friends with Sam Houston and in the spring of 1851 he traveled with Sam Houston from Baton Rouge, Louisiana to Texas. That year he moved his family to Dallas to help his ailing wife. Stone became a prominent lawyer and early civic leader who worked to bring the railroad to Dallas. The Sumpter/Leggitt Building and F.W. Woolworth Store define the west side of the street and were constructed between 1894 and 1918. These building represent the few remaining examples of once prevalent styles and scales for buildings in the central business district. In the 19th century Stone Street was the site of Mayer’s Beer Garden where outdoor orchestras entertained and the large German immigrant population celebrated polka festivals. Stone Street later served as link from the retail stores and offices on Main Street to the theaters on Elm Street. George Kessler proposed in his 1911 master plan, A City Plan for Dallas, numerous street adjustments, realignments and extensions to help decrease congestion and increase property values. Kessler intended to extend Stone Street from Commerce Street to Pacific but this never came to fruition. Stone Street served as the site of an informal gathering place for downtown workers and residents until the 1960’s when the city closed the street.

Wheatley Park		City Acquisition: 0
3700 Meyers Street, Dallas, TX 75201	Priority Level: 2	Historic Names: Not Applicable
Wheatley Place was developed by brother's T.L. and Alex Camp as one of the first planned residential areas for African Americans in Dallas. The 1916 plat submitted to the city set aside land for a school and park to serve the new community. The park shares the block with Phyllis Wheatley Elementary, a two story yellow brick school is listed on the National Register. The development, school and park was named after Phyllis Wheatley born in 1754 and brought to America from Senegal in Africa. She was sold into slavery to John Wheatley and was educated by the family. Phyllis Wheatley became a well known published poet and her book was the second book of poetry published by a woman in America. The Camp brothers sold the site to the City in 1919 however the deed was returned in 1920 because of fear that the site "used as a play grounds for negro children" would "cause serious friction between white and colored races to the endangerment of the peace of the community." It is difficult to determine exactly when the City regained ownership of the property. By 1921 the Park Board sent correspondence regarding concessions in the park. In correspondence the park is referenced to as "South Dallas Colored Park or Booker T. Washington Park" but nothing definitively confirms these as official park names. The park served as a focal point for the community as a place for recreation, large social events, movies and concerts. The park hosted movies with crowds so large people stood along the sidewalks and in the streets to watch. The "moving picture booth" had to be moved in 1924 to another location in the park that could host a larger crowd. That same year permanent lighting, tennis courts and other park improvements were installed by the city.

William B. Dean Park		City Acquisition: 1913
3636 Turtle Creek Boulevard, Dallas, TX 75219	Priority Level: I	Historic Names: Turtle Creek Park
Originally named Turtle Creek Park, the land was acquired from 1913 to 1915. Most of the land was donated by property owners with additional land purchased in the 1920's. The park was renamed in honor of William Dean because of his leadership as chairman of the park board 1971-1975. The park is the site of the Kalita Humphreys Theater. The theater was commissioned in 1955 and completed in 1959 and is the only free-standing theater fully designed by Wright under construction before his death. "Wright was pleased with the naturalistic site, with its exposed bluffs, creek views and indigenous plantings." These same features found pleasing to Wright were the same reason George Kessler created the parkway 40 years prior.
